Independent supplement aligned to Genki I Lesson 3. All exercises and recordings in this pack are original.

Your route through Lesson 3

All Japanese in this pack uses hiragana or katakana. Spaces separate useful chunks for beginners. English explanations keep the focus on grammar. These are original practice materials, not copied textbook exercises.

Use five sessions of about 45-60 minutes: (1) guide + 001-040; (2) 041-080; (3) 081-120; (4) 121-165; (5) 166-200. Split a session if needed. Begin each session by redoing five earlier mistakes.

Try every question before revealing its answer. Each numbered item is one question, even when it asks for a form plus a reason. Use 1 point only when the whole answer is right; for open responses, compare meaning, ending, and particles with the model.

The final 10 items are a checkpoint, not a promise of mastery. Aim for at least 8/10 without help, at least 24/30 on verb forms, and 20/25 on listening. Then redo missed items the next day without looking.

1. Three conjugation groups

Start from the dictionary form: たべる, のむ, する. Group names describe how endings change. They are separate from meaning types such as action and state.

Ru-verbs: remove the final る, then add ます or ません. たべる → たべ → たべます / たべません. みる → みます / みません. おきる → おきます. ねる → ねます.

U-verbs: change the FINAL u-row kana to its i-row partner, then add ます or ません. のむ → のみ → のみます / のみません. はなす → はなし → はなします. Do not change earlier kana.

Final-kana map: う → い; く → き; ぐ → ぎ; す → し; つ → ち; ぬ → に; ぶ → び; む → み; る → り. This is a polite-form rule; it is not a rule for every conjugation.

Irregular: する → します / しません; くる → きます / きません. A word ending in する follows する: べんきょうする → べんきょうします / べんきょうしません.

Do not decide from the last る alone. かえる (return home) is a u-verb: かえります, not かえます. Many verbs ending in an i/e sound + る are ru-verbs, but there are exceptions. Memorize the group with the dictionary form.

The polite stem is the part immediately before ます: たべ, のみ, し, き. A stem is a building block, not usually a complete polite sentence by itself. Do not add です to a ます-form verb.

2. Verb meanings and the so-called present tense

Conjugation group answers “How does the word change?” Meaning type answers “What kind of situation does it describe?” Most verbs practised here describe actions. Some describe a change or endpoint, such as おきる or かえる. Other Japanese verbs express states. These meaning categories do not decide whether a verb is u, ru, or irregular.

ます is polite nonpast affirmative. With an action verb, it commonly describes a habit or a future action: まいにち ほんを よみます。 = I read books every day. あした ほんを よみます。 = I will read a book tomorrow.

ません is polite nonpast negative: コーヒーを のみません。 = I do not drink coffee / I will not drink coffee. Context and time words choose the reading. Japanese does not add an equivalent of “will” here.

An ordinary action verb in ます does not by itself mean “am doing right now.” テレビを みます normally means “watch TV” or “will watch TV.” The usual ongoing-action construction is taught later. Do not translate every ます form as an English -ing form.

A state can hold at the present moment without being an action in progress. For example, わかります means “understand” (preview vocabulary, not tested here). Thus “nonpast” does not mean “never refers to now.” The important distinction is the meaning of the verb in context.

A sentence without a time word may need context. がっこうに いきます can describe a regular activity or a coming trip. Politeness, positive/negative meaning, and time reference are different choices.

Verb endings do not change for I, you, or they. わたしは たべます and アキさんは たべます use the same ending. The speaker or subject is often omitted when clear.

3. Particles: を, で, に, and へ

を marks the direct object: the thing affected by an action. みずを のみます。 = I drink water. えいがを みます。 = I watch a movie. Write を; pronounce it "o."

で marks where an action happens: としょかんで ほんを よみます。 = I read books at the library. The library is the action setting; the book is the object.

に marks a destination with いく, くる, and かえる: がっこうに いきます。 = I go to school. うちに かえります。 = I return home. に also marks specified times: しちじに おきます。

へ can mark the direction/destination of movement: がっこうへ いきます。 Pronounce the particle へ as "e." For the simple destination sentences in this pack, に and へ are both possible. へ cannot replace time に.

Compare: としょかに いきます。 = I go to the library. としょかで べんきょうします。 = I study at the library. Choose the particle from the role of the place, not just from the English word "at."

Not every verb takes を. ねます and おきます do not need a direct object. With べんきょうする, にほんごを べんきょうします is natural. These lessons focus on action-location で; other uses come later.

4. Time references

Use に with a specified clock time: ろくに, しちじはんに, ごごさんじに. なんじに おきますか. asks what time someone gets up.

Normally use no に after relative times such as きょう (today), あした (tomorrow), あさって (the day after tomorrow), and こんや (tonight), or repeating expressions such as まいにち (every day) and まいあさ (every morning).

いつ means “when” and normally appears without に: いつ いきますか. Contrast なんじに (at what time).

Days of the week allow に: どのようびに いきます. In many contexts it can be omitted. Broad times such as あさ (morning), ばん (evening), and しゅうまつ (weekend) can also appear without に; some permit に depending on context. The questions specify when a particular answer is required.

Time can become the topic: あしたは べんきょうします. = As for tomorrow, I will study. That は frames the sentence; it is not the same job as time に.

Clock reminders: よじ = 4:00; しちじ = 7:00; くじ = 9:00; はん = half past. ごぜん = a.m.; ごご = p.m. じゅうにじ = 12:00.

5. Invitations with ませんか

Take the polite negative form and add か: のむ → のみません → のみませんか。 In an invitation context: “Would you like to drink ...?” or “Shall we drink ...?” It is not simply a refusal.

いっしょに ひるごはんを たべませんか。 = Would you like to have lunch together? どうぶに えいがを みませんか。 = Would you like to see a movie on Saturday?

A clear acceptance: いいですね。 = That sounds good. A gentle decline: すみません。 どうぶは ちょっと……。 = Sorry, Saturday is a little difficult. The unfinished ちょっと is a conventional soft refusal in this context.

Ask for details with なんじに (what time), どこで (where an activity happens), or どこに (where someone goes). Use your existing forms: なんじに いきますか。

Do not mix endings: たべませんか is correct; たべますませんか is not. The invitation pattern uses the same stem as ます. Avoid answering an invitation with a bare yes/no if that would be unclear; いいですね is a helpful beginner response.

6. Frequency adverbs

まいにち = every day; いつも = always; たいてい = usually; よく = often; ときどき = sometimes.
These can accompany an affirmative verb: よく おんがくを ききます。

For the Lesson 3 pattern, pair あまり with a negative verb: あまり テレビを みません。 = I do not watch TV very much / very often. Pair ぜんぜん with a negative verb: ぜんぜん コーヒーを のみません。 = I do not drink coffee at all.

Compare あまり のみません (not much / not often) and ぜんぜん のみません (not at all). The negative ending is part of the meaning. Frequency words are not exact percentages.

A useful beginner position is after the topic or time phrase and before the object/place: わたしは よく うちで ほんを よみます。 Other natural positions are possible.

7. Word order

A dependable starting pattern is: TOPIC は + TIME + PLACE で + OBJECT を + VERB. わたしは あした としょかんで にほんごを べんきょうします。

For a movement verb, use DESTINATION に or へ: わたしは あした がっこうに いきます。 You do not need to fill every slot in every sentence.

The verb normally closes these sentences; か follows it in a question. Keep particles with their phrases. あした わたしは にほんごを としょかんで べんきょうします is also possible, though the first pattern is easier to build.

Do not treat the model word order as the only valid answer. In rearrangement questions, use every supplied chunk once and keep the final verb at the end. In translations, equivalent natural orders are accepted.

8. The topic particle は

Write は and pronounce it “wa” when it is the topic particle. It introduces what the sentence is about, often with a contrast: わたしは まいにち べんきょうします。

The topic need not be the person doing the action: しゅうまつは よく えいがを みます。 = On weekends, I often watch movies. Here the weekend is the topic.

An object can become a topic. コーヒーを のみません is a neutral statement about not drinking coffee. コーヒーは のみません frames coffee as the topic, often contrasting it with something else. In this simple object-topic pattern, は replaces を; do not write をは.

A location can be contrasted while preserving で: うちでは べんきょうしません。 = At home, I do not study. Here では is the location particle で plus the topic particle は, not a negative form of です.

Do not replace every particle with は. は marks the topic; を, で, and に show other roles. The wider は/が distinction is outside this practice pack.

How to use the labs

Reading: scan the title, read the kana passage without translating every word, answer the five questions, and check the evidence in the passage. Finally read it aloud once.

Listening: read only the questions first. Listen at normal speed for the situation. Listen again and take notes. Try slow speed only if needed. Reveal the transcript after answering; underline the ending or particle you missed, then repeat each line aloud.

The ten WAV files use an installed Japanese synthetic voice (Microsoft Haruka Desktop). They are study aids, not recordings from the textbook or a human speaker. Normal and slow versions contain the same content. No internet or installed Japanese voice is needed to play the saved audio.

Give listening comprehension answers in English unless an item asks for kana. For dictation, ignore spaces and punctuation when comparing. After correction, listen again with the transcript closed.

Verb reference

Cover the last two columns and produce the forms aloud. The group is part of what you memorize.

Dictionary	Meaning / group	Affirmative	Negative
たべる	eat / ru	たべます	たべません
みる	see; watch / ru	みます	みません

Scoring and review

Give one point per fully correct numbered question. For open responses, check the intended meaning, conjugation, and particles. Word order may vary naturally. Write the IDs you need to redo.

Review IDs: _____

01 / Know your verbs

Questions 001-030 / Identify the group before you conjugate. U, ru, and irregular are conjugation groups, not meanings.

001. Classify 食べる (eat): u, ru, or irregular?

002. Classify みる (see; watch): u, ru, or irregular?

003. Classify おきる (get up): u, ru, or irregular?

004. Classify ねる (sleep; go to bed): u, ru, or irregular?

005. Classify いく (go): u, ru, or irregular?

006. Classify かえる (return home): u, ru, or irregular?

007. Classify きく (listen; hear; ask): u, ru, or irregular?

008. Classify のむ (drink): u, ru, or irregular?

009. Classify はなす (speak): u, ru, or irregular?

010. Classify よむ (read): u, ru, or irregular?

011. Classify する (do): u, ru, or irregular?

012. Classify くる (come): u, ru, or irregular?

013. Classify べんきょうする (study): u, ru, or irregular?

014. Classify かう (buy [extra]): u, ru, or irregular?

015. Classify まつ (wait [extra]): u, ru, or irregular?

016. True or false: every dictionary form ending in る is a ru-verb.

017. Which needs final る → り: たべる or かえる?

018. Which pair shares a conjugation group: みる + おきる, or みる + かえる?

019. In the polite-form rule, what does final む change to?

020. In the polite-form rule, what does final す change to?

021. In the polite-form rule, what does final く change to?

022. Extra pattern: final う in かう changes to which kana before ます?

023. Extra pattern: final つ in まつ changes to which kana before ます?

024. Write only the polite stem of 食べる.

025. Write only the polite stem of のむ.

026. Write only the polite stem of する.

027. Write only the polite stem of くる.

028. Does “action verb” tell you whether a verb is u or ru? Explain briefly.

029. Which label tells you how to form ます: “u-verb” or “habitual action”?

030. You meet an unfamiliar verb ending in an e sound + る. Is that enough to know its group for certain?

02 / Build the forms

Questions 031-060 / Write the requested polite nonpast form. Say the stem aloud before adding the ending.

031. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of たべる (eat).

032. Write the polite nonpast negative of たべる (eat).

033. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of みる (see; watch).

034. Write the polite nonpast negative of みる (see; watch).

035. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of おきる (get up).

036. Write the polite nonpast negative of おきる (get up).

037. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of ねる (sleep; go to bed).

038. Write the polite nonpast negative of ねる (sleep; go to bed).

039. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of いく (go).

040. Write the polite nonpast negative of いく (go).

041. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of かえる (return home).

042. Write the polite nonpast negative of 帰る (return home).

043. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of 聞く (listen; hear; ask).

044. Write the polite nonpast negative of 聞く (listen; hear; ask).

045. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of のむ (drink).

046. Write the polite nonpast negative of のむ (drink).

047. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of はなす (speak).

048. Write the polite nonpast negative of はなす (speak).

049. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of よむ (read).

050. Write the polite nonpast negative of よむ (read).

051. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of する (do).

052. Write the polite nonpast negative of する (do).

053. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of くる (come).

054. Write the polite nonpast negative of くる (come).

055. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of べんきょうする (study).

056. Write the polite nonpast negative of べんきょうする (study).

057. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of かう (buy [extra]).

058. Write the polite nonpast negative of かう (buy [extra]).

059. Write the polite nonpast affirmative of まつ (wait [extra]).

060. Write the polite nonpast negative of まつ (wait [extra]).

03 / What does it mean?

Questions 061-075 / Separate habit, future plans, ongoing actions, and negative statements.

061. Translate: まいにち ほんを よみます。

062. Translate: あした ほんを よみます。

063. Translate: きょうは コーヒーを のみません。

064. Does テレビを みます by itself normally mean “I am watching TV right now”?

065. Choose the best reading of まいあさ しちじに おきます: habit or future one-time plan?
